WESTERLY

A quartette of Westerly lads, all under 11, are on the verge of being sent to the school for boys in Meriden, dependent upon the action of the police authorities of the town of Stonington. Saturday afternoon last the Maxson hardware store was entered through a window in the cellar, and from thence to the store proper, where the boys helped themselves to a dozen jackknives and a box of scissors. The break and robbery was discovered Sunday morning when the store was opened for business. Report was made to Patrolman Wheeler of the Pawcatuck police, who invoked the aid of the Westerly police. Patrolman Mitchell was assigned to the case, and he soon hit the trail that carried the boys and to the information that two of them did the stealing and gave or sold some of the loot to the other boys. By advice of Patrolman Mitchell, the two self-confessed guilty boys were given over to Patrolman Wheeler, who filed the information with Prosecutor Hewitt of the Stonington town court. The boys were not locked up, their parents promising to deliver them when required.

These boys are said to be the same who entered the store of George O. Murphy Saturday and abstracted $1.50 from the cash register. They are also of the same group who did some wire cutting at the movie house in Pawcatuck, and caused the disarrangement of the clock in front of the office of William A. Wilcox in West Broad street. This clock is connected with the Western Union system and when it failed to work correctly the fact was indicated on the master clock. Linemen investigated and found that a wire in the rear of the Wilcox office had been cut. This wire leads across a road and down the stairway from the Wilcox office. The boys evidently supposed the wire furnished the light to the electric lamp over the door of the exit and the plan was to put this light out of business so that the boys could sneak into the movie house unobserved. This is the third time this wire has been cut and now the linemen have placed the wire beyond the reach of boys. The lure of the moving pictures is what prompted the lads to their wrong-doing.

At the annual meeting of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of Rhode Island, held in Providence, officers were elected as follows: Charles Hewitt Smith of Christ church, Westerly, president; Thomas H. Maymon, East Providence, vice president; Henry P. Harbach, Providence, secretary and representative to the national assembly.

Harley Thomas Proctor, who died at his residence in New York city Saturday, was born in Providence, where he and his brother, William A. Proctor, were the pioneer soap manufacturers on a large scale in America, and in a few years they amassed a fortune. William A. Proctor owned the mansion at Watch Hill known as the Sunshine cottage, now the property of Richard B. Mellon. Associated with William P. Anderson and others, and heading the syndicate of Proctor & Anderson, a large section of Watch Hill was purchased and sold at a big profit. Harley T. Proctor and his nephew, William C. Proctor, one of the presidential campaign managers for General Wood, were frequent visitors at Watch Hill, and all were well known to the older residents of Westerly.

After his marriage with Miss Mary E. Sanford of Cincinnati, Harley Proctor moved to New York and had a real residence there. His interest, however, remained in the Berkshire Hills. He built a handsome summer villa in Lenox in 1908 and made that his home. Until two years ago he hardly ever used a motor car, relying on the stable of 40 driving horses which he maintained at Lenox. Surviving him are Mrs. Proctor, two sons, William and Rodney, and a daughter, Mrs. Fritz Boelgenhaus of Greenwich, Conn.

P., vice president of the college.

The strike of the members of the Red Carriers and Laborers' union continues, but it cannot be definitely learned whether the strikers meant just what they said when a declaration was made that unless the demand for a 35-cent an hour pay was met by Monday, the figure would be changed to 50 cents an hour.
